Crosscard Medical Records Card

Medical records are traditionally held by a patients' GP, either on paper or on their computer system.

However, in the modern day consumer society patients require access to their notes and have a right to see the information held against them.

In many cases the patient feels safer with their record under their control and readily available without reference to their doctor. It is, of course, possible to provide access to systems via the internet, allowing patients to view their records on-line, but there are many instances when this is not appropriate. For example, the patient may be unconscious in A&E and unable to give anyone website details or they may be overseas with no access to the internet.

The Crosscare personal medical record card allows the patient to carry their own medical record with them on a credit card sized USB device. The actual card is slightly thicker than a credit card and has a fold out USB connector on the side, so it can be plugged into any computer, anywhere in the world, with a USB port. It will work with both standard PC's and Apple Macintosh machines.

It can be used as an electronic membership card or a corporate wellness card and is ideal for patients who travel. A full copy of the patients' record resides on the card and is accessed via entry of their password. It is stored to AES encryption standards which are approved by the NHS and the American government.

For patients who may be unconscious and being treated by an A&E department, an emergency setting allows access to a limited version of the record without the password. The card can also be updated over the internet, so the patient can receive, for example, their updated test results, once approved by their clinician, simply by plugging the card into a computer and choosing "Update my Record" wherever they are at a time that suits them.

A new revenue stream

The Crosscard can earn significant additional revenues for a practice. Simply provide us with your logo and artwork and we will organise delivery on your behalf. Then, simply use the card creation facility within Crosscare every time a card is provided to a patient. If used as a Membership card it is possible for the cost to be absorbed into the standard monthly membership fee. The card can also be configured as a subscription card, with an annual renewal date built into it.
